I hose witnesses stated that contributions had customarily been made by the American Sugar Refining Company, or so called trust, to the local or State campling of cuch of the two great political parties in several States, and they also denied that any such contributions were made for the purpose of securing or defeating legislation in Congress, or to aid in the election of any United States Senator, or for any other improper purpose. No other evidence or other testimony has been offered or suggested to your committee nor has any been discovered which would tend to support the statements of the sant Lidwards in this regard.

Where interrogated as to other imputations contained to said article, too vigue to be characterized as charges, the witness was unable to give any authority or suggest any foundation for his statements. Whatever of impropriety may altach to the presence at the National Capital of representatives of agregated would in industries affected by a tariff bill and to their importanties for protection by Congressional legislation, and the impropriety cannot be denied no evidence has been adduced before your committee tending to show improper conduct on the part of those engaged in the traming of the sugar schedule of the tariff bill then pending before the benate.

The Minerly Report

I defect the seen submitted to the committice which proves that the upgar schedule was made in order to fulfit obligations to the sugar trust for campaign contributions. All the witnesses have depled in the most explicit manner that such obligitions existed or played any part in the construction of the augar schedule. But the undersigned feel it is their duty to point out how that schedule was staally made.

The augus of health. The Minerly Report

The sugar schedule was made and reported to the Senate by Democratic members of the Funnice Committee. The Senators composing the Democratic majority of that committee are, therefore, publicly responsible for the schedule it is also admitted, and it is proved by the sworn testimony of every witness called that the present form of schedule was that desired by representatives of the sugar trust. The undersigned believe it is of interest and importunce to the public that the steps, so far as they are proved by the testimony herein submitted by which this schedule was formed and reported by the Finance Committee, should be known. Without going beyond the sword testimony there were three sets of interests or opinions involved in the settlement of this sugar question.

of interests or opinions involved in the settlement of this sugar question.

First, There were those who had no ideal or pecuniary interest in the matter whatever, but who believed in a general proposition that all sugar should dome into this country free of duty.

Second, There were the producers of raw sigar in this country who desired a productive duty for their industry.

Third, There were the refiners who desired a protective, duty for thair industried in protective, duty for thair industried in protective, duty for thair indus-

It was admitted that there must be some duty on sugars, and the question which now arose was what kind of a some duty on siggirs, and the question which now atobe was what kind of a duty?

Here the producers and the refiners came into conflict. The producers favored the epoclid duty as first reported. The refiners favored the advalorem duty, and this latter principle is the one embodied in the tariff bill as it now stands. In regard to raw sugars all the witnesses that were questioned testified without exception to the fact that the producers demanded or deefred a specific duty, while the reflacers demanded and the advalorem rates.

The point of interest is to learn how the specific duties were abandoned and the advalorem duties substituted for them. It appears in the testimony of the representatives of the sugar trust, Havemeyer, the president of the company; Mr Searles, its treasurer, Mr. Henry Reed, representing the Boston refluers; Mr Carl Meyer and Mr II. L. Terrilli were in Washington more or less constrainty after the passage of the tariff bill through that they

It appears also from the testimony that these representatives of the sugar trust presents d their views fully to the pacubles of the Finance Committee and of necessity did so privately because public hearings as to various industries involved in the triff had been refused.

The report closes as follows: The undersigned have felt it important to lay before the benate and the country the fact that the sugar schedule, as it by which the sugar trust reached what it desired and obtained a substantial not Placed on Trial

Before the Court at Lyons.

LTONS, Aug. 2! The trial of Caserio, the murderer of President Carnot, began here to-day. Caserio was transferred from the prison to the place of justice at five o'clock this morning under a strong guard. The open space around the court building was guarded by military and police. At a quarter to nine the court room doors were opened and it was quickly filled to averflowing.

As the judges took their seats upon the bench, Caserio was ordered to be placed in the prisoner's dock. He is a mild faced, common place youth. His complexion is fair and there is a faint suspicion of jelown upon his upper lip. As he entered the dock he gared about him in a way that betokened more curiosity than interest in his surroundings. Presently he enught sight of M. Debreuil, his counsel.

His face lighted up as he bowed smilingly and gracefully to his advocate and at that moment he seemed to remember that he still wore his cap which he removed.

Judge Breullise then swore in an interpreter who was accepted by Caserie This was done so that there should be no do be that the prisoner should under stand everything that was said to him. The jury was then empanuelled Several of the jurors were objected to by Attorney General Felchier and they were replaced by others. The indictment against the prisoner was then read recounting the details of the tragedy already familiar to the divided world. Judge Breuillac then began his interrogation of the prisoner, This magistrate does not

The Judge then discussed Caserio's presence at the revolutionary lectures of Signor Gorl, a lawyer, in Milan, in spite of the expostulations of his family, whereupon Caseriq exclaimed "Hu manity is greater than family."
He asked him whether he did not act as a courier between the anarchists of France and Italy after the Italian an archist journal, Amici De Popola, had been suppressed.
Caserio answered "No. The police do their work and I do mine I have nothing to say more than that they, the police, taxed communications between various anarchists systematically "The prisoner denied knowing a single an archist."

to-day Whon they adjourned this afterneon the stereotyped reply that nothing had been done was given to all inquirers it is known that while a number of tentative propositions were discussed regarding the principal items in dispute, none of them was adopted But there appears to be a prospect of than esceess In discussing the condition of affairs this afternoon, Mr. Jones, one of the Senate conferees, stated that things were now in such shape that it was possible for the conferees to hope that they could reach a conclusion. It is known that coal and from no longer trouble the committee so far as the Senate is concerned.
Coal will remain as it is now and if the House conferees want the reciprocal clause in the kom they can have it
